

The UniCredit Group is pleased to see our Art Collection grow as a result of the merger with Capitalia. The Collection of the Banca di Roma, now a member of the UniCredit Group, has much to offer.

First and foremost, the Collection brings alive a passion for art. It contains works from a variety of artists and multiple genres from across the centuries. This is vividly represented by the quality, beauty and significance of the pieces selected for this virtual exhibition.

Secondly, the Collection also serves as a cultural guide showing how, over the years, painstaking attention has been paid to local traditions which, at the same time, are imbued with those much wider ranging tendencies that have always characterized Italian art.

Lastly, the exhibition shows how art can help us “talk” about ourselves, our dreams and our values.

It is not from chance that the UniCredit art project bears the headline “Art Talks”. It is because we believe that art gets us talking, and connects us.

I hope this virtual exhibition too will be a vehicle for us to talk, to get to know each other, and ourselves, better. And I hope it provides a platform for us to look into our past, into our history, and to see clearly our new shared future.
